

Section C Continues Pith and Substance Winning Streak

On February 16, 2008, first years students from sections A, B, and C competed in the annual Pith and Substance. The McInnes Room in the Student Union Building was filled with students who watched their peers light-heartedly mock law school professors through short skits. Section C students continued their winning streak from the 2007 event, taking first place as judged by the professors.

The night was not only a night for students, but included professors who participated in the annual tradition by mocking students in a skit of their own. Professors not only participated in the acting and the judging, but also donated items for a silent auction. The silent professor auction featured items such as karaoke and home-cooked meals with law school professors. It raised nearly $1900 for Phoenix House and the Bide Awhile animal shelter.
